

Richard Gere, Photos Submitted for the Record

Tulku Tenzin Delek Rinpoche, a highly respected and revered Tibetan lama, who died in prison on July 12, 2015, while in custody of the Chinese government in the 13th year of serving a life sentence.

A group photo of Tulku Tenzin Delek Rinpoche with children from one of the orphanages and old people's homes that he helped support and build, taken sometime before his arrest.

Gedhun Choekyi Nyima, the 11th Panchen Lama, who was kidnapped by the Chinese government as a six-year-old child, and who has been missing in Chinese custody since 1995.

Kunchok Tsepel, founder of a Tibetan literary website, who in 2009 was sentenced to 15 years in prison in a closed trial on “disclosing state secrets” charges that many believe were related to content on his website relating to the 2008 protests.

Lobsang Kunchok, a monk from Kirti monastery, who was sentenced to death with a two-year reprieve in 2013 on “intentional homicide” charges for allegedly inciting several Tibetans to self-immolate.

Khenpo Kartse (Khenpo Karma Tsewang), mentioned in H. Res. 337.