Andrea Gittleman is the program manager for the Simon-Skjoldt Center for the Prevention of Genocide. Previously, she was interim director of US policy and senior legislative counsel at Physicians for Human Rights, where she designed advocacy and policy strategies on a broad range of international human rights issues including mass atrocities. Prior to that, she served as an Arthur Helton Global Human Rights Fellow with the Burma Lawyers' Council in Mae Sot, Thailand, where she coordinated an international advocacy campaign for criminal accountability in Burma. She also worked with the New York University Immigrant Rights Clinic as a law student and has had legal internships with Legal Momentum (the Women's Legal Defense and Education Fund), the New York Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Rights Project, and Human Rights Watch's Women's Rights Division. Prior to attending law school, she served as a Peace Corps volunteer in Mauritania, where she managed gender and development programs. She received a JD from the New York University School of Law and a BA in political science and international studies from the University of Chicago.

Daniel P. Sullivan is the Director of Policy and Government Relations at United to End Genocide where he manages the organization's conflict analysis and development of policy recommendations related to Burma, South Sudan, Sudan, Syria, and the prevention of genocide and mass atrocities. Dan leads outreach to the U.S. administration and Congress and coordination with international non-governmental organizations and civil society groups. Previously Dan worked for Human Rights First, the Brookings Institution and the Albright Stonebridge

Group, where he assisted former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright in her role as co-chair of the Genocide Prevention Task Force. Dan received his bachelor's degree from Harvard University and a Masters from the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies.
